09/102,016

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus for providing treatments to a calling party in a distributed communications system. When a calling party unsuccessfully completes a communications session, the apparatus sends a message to the calling party's communications device. The message includes an indication of why the call was not successfully completed along with a corresponding multimedia message or an address for accessing the message.